

NESTORE

Ageing can be a challenging process and a bewildering period of one's life, especially around retirement. Yet remaining active and socially included are key to stay physically and emotionally well-rounded.

Older adults, technologists, sociologists and healthcare professionals are teaming up to develop a companion that will propose personalised advices and supported decision-making to our older selves so we can live longer independently.

A group of diverse elderly people, including a woman in a white visor and a man with a white beard and cap, are laughing and stacking their hands in a circle outdoors. The background shows green trees and a bright sky.
